The bill to promote Agriculture and family domestic manufactures within this state was read, and amended, on motion of Mr. M'Kay, and further amended, on motion of Mr. Speed.—The bill was then read the 3d and last time in this House, and was ordered to be engrossed.

Mr. Branch, from the joint select committee, to whom was referred the resolution relative to the administration of the Banks in this State, have had the same under consideration, and, after an examination necessarily brief, ask leave to report the following facts, which have been collected from sundry persons, and among others, the Cashier of the State Bank, and the gentleman who has had the principal agency in supplying the applicants at the Bank with northern funds.

The result has been to ascertain that the State Bank in this place, and the agency of the Newbern Bank, have been for some time past in the practice of making discounts which otherwise would not have been made, and of requiring from the applicants at the Bank, as a pre-requisite to accommodation, the same amount in specie, notes of other specie paying Banks, or northern funds, in exchange for their own notes, as they discount the note of the applicant for, which funds we also learn at this time four per cent above par.

The Cashier of the State Bank further declares, that the Bank generally pays its notes in specie, or northern funds, when presented for payment, except when runs are made upon the Bank by brokers, or persons who they have good reasons to believe intend to draw the specie for the purpose of carrying to other Banks. But that they generally redeem their notes in specie or northern funds, which are often preferred to the specie, when presented by those who obtain them in the course of trade.

The Cashier further states, that the State Bank does sometimes, though not often, sell their funds at a premium, but that they oftener buy at a premium. That the amount sold since the Bank commenced its operation does not exceed ten thousand dollars.

It also appears that the Banks share no part of the premium given from the purchase of those northern funds, by the applicants for accommodation, and that they have been in the habit of paying their at par for their own notes.

The reasons urged by the Cashier in vindication of the course which the Banks have pursued, are these, that their specie would soon be exhausted by runs made upon them by brokers and others, who buy up their notes for speculation, if they did not refuse to pay specie, and that they have been constrained to adopt their present mode of discounting for northern funds, or to curtail thier discounts very materially.

Whereas, it manifestly appears to this General Assembly, from the report of the Joint Committee appointed to examine into the administration of the Banks of North-Carolina, that the State Bank at Raleigh is in the habit of refusing specie payments when the Directors think proper to do so, in palpable violation of their charter, and that they, and the agency of the Bank of Newbern at this place, are in the practice also of demanding as a perquisite to the granting of accommodation at the Bank, that the applicant should furnish them with an equal amount of northern funds, at par, which funds the applicant in most cases is compelled to give four per cent. for, and which in market will command that premium. Therefore,

Resolved, By the Senate and House of Commons, That the Governor of this State be requested to submit the facts as contained in the report of the aforesaid committee, (appointed to enquire into the administration of the Banks of North Carolina,) to some one or more legal gentlemen, in this State or elsewhere, eminent for their abilities and legal learning, and totally unconnected with those establishments.

And if it should be the opinion of such counsel that the Banks, or either of them, have directly or indirectly, through the medium of northern funds, exacted more than six per cent per annum for their discounts, or have failed to pay specie for their notes, as by the terms of their charters they are bound to do, that then, and in that case, it shall be the duty of the Governor, and he is hereby empowered and directed to employ counsel to institute a judicial investigation into the administration of those institutions, and to ascertain, judicially, by what authority they have transcended their chartered powers; and, furthermore, to adopt the most efficient means to check the progress of such a dangerous usurpation of power, so much calculated to enrich the monied capitalist, and to impoverish the community generally.

Ordered to lie on the table.

HOUSE OF COMMONS.

Thursday, Dec. 19.

Mr. Strange, from the committee, to whom was referred the petition of the inhabitants of the town of Fayetteville, made a report favorable to the prayer of the petitioners, recommending the passage of a bill to incorporate the Cape-Fear Steam Boat Company.

The bill to provide a revenue for the payment of the civil list and contingent charges of government, for the year 1823, was read the first time.

A motion was then made for its third reading, which, while pending, Mr Graves moved further to amend the bill, by increasing the tax on Brokers from 500 to 1000 dollars, which was negatived, 72 to 41, and the bill then passed its third reading.

Mr. Lamb presented a resolution requiring the board for Internal Improvements, to furnish to the legislature, a detailed statement of all their expenditures, from the time of Mr. Fulton's engagement, in Europe, to the present day, &c. &c. A motion was made for its indefinite postponement, but before acting on it, the house adjourned.

Mr. Hill from the balloting committee for colonel of cavalry, attached to the 10th brigade, reported that A. A. M'Dowell was duly elected.

The House resumed the consideration of the resolution submitted by Mr. Lamb, relative to the Board of Internal Improvement, and the question recurring on its indefinite postponement, Mr. Mebane moved that it lie on the table until Monday, which was agreed to—yeas 80, nays 43.

Monday, Dec. 23.

The bill concerning the hire of slaves, was rejected on its third reading—76 to 43.

Mr. Fisher, from the committee to whom was referred a resolution, directing them to enquire into the expenses incurred in transporting the Statue of Washington from Wilmington to this place, reported that though the sum of $1,15[illegible] had been disbursed for that purpose, yet in their opinion no blame can be attached to the Architect.

Charleston, Dec. 25.

Interesting from Havana.

By the packet schr. Comet, Capt. Campbell, arrived this morning in 5 days from Havana, we have received the papers of that city to the 16th inst.

A revolutionary movement which at one moment threatened the most serious consequences, appears to have commenced in the city of Havana, on the 6th inst. A spirit of enmity has long existed in that city, and indeed throughout the whole Island, between the natives, (Criollos) and the European Spaniards. (Goves.)—The recent election of Deputies to the Cortes, in which these parties were distinctly arrayed against each other, had nearly fanned these embers into a flame. But at the time of the Comet's sailing, quiet had been restored.

The leaders of the native party were the young gentlemen of liberal education in the city, while the European party was principally composed of Catalonians, Grocery Keepers, &c.

San Juan de Ulua, Nov. 15.—Iturbide is at Jalapa, and is expected in Vera Cruz from day to day. There is a variety of conjectures on the object of his coming: some think that he intends to take his passage to the United States. Certain it is, that there is near the island of Sacrificios, an American ship at anchor, taking a great quantity of sea-stores; she has already shipped about eight millions of dollars; and Iturbide is marching down with his family and household. I will inform you of the result. It is also certain, that he has seized a convoy of two millions of dollars, which he has already disposed of. Courier.

THE OBSERVER.

Fayetteville, N. C.

THURSDAY, JAN. 2, 1823

Jail-Breaking.—On Saturday night last, five of the prisoners confined in the jail of this place, made their escape, through a hole in the wall at the west end. One of the prisoners who remained, states, that those who escaped were about a month in digging and perforating the wall. On Sunday, several parties were dispatched in various directions in pursuit of them; and on Monday, one of the parties returned with two of the prisoners. The other three have not, as yet, been taken up.

Petersburg, Dec. 24.

Vigilance.—Two persons, against whom strong suspicions exist as having been concerned in the attempt to rob the mail on Friday night the 13th inst. were arrested in this town last week, and are now in jail. Neither of these have been recognized by the driver. The other villain, it is believed, has fled to a distant country, whither Mr. Wood (the police officer) attended by a constable, has gone in pursuit of him. Republican.

The choice of Senators of the United States appears to be determined, in the southern states, principally with relation to the next Presidency, although considerations of personal qualification may, perhaps, be allowed to have some weight. South-Carolina has elected an anti-Crawford candidate, but he is also a man of talents; and North Carolina seems, in return, determined to re-establish the balance by sending to the Senate a representative in the interests of Mr. Secretary of the Treasury, whether of talents or not we cannot say.—The candidates for election at the late Legislature of that state are, Messrs. Branch and Yancey, whom we believe to be Crawford men, and Mr. Stokes the present Senator, who is not.—The votes for these gentlemen in the 5th balloting stood, for Branch, 89—Stokes, 51—and Yancey, 46. Mr. Branch is from the eastern, the other gentlemen from the western division of the state, which may account for the apparent want of union among those whom we suppose to be in the same interest.—*N. Savannah, Dec. 20.

The Hammond Case.—Our active correspondent at Milledgeville, has forwarded to us the report of the special committee to whom was referred so much of the Governor's communication as related to Col. Hammond. The report will be found in another part of this paper. It is a dispassionate and lucid document, containing sentiments which are in perfect unison with a large majority of the good people of this state. It places the governor decidedly in the wrong in every point he took, and concludes by recommending to the legislature the passage of a resolution, censuring his excellency, for displacing the secretary of state. The report was before the House of Representatives on Monday last, and there is no doubt of its being carried in that body by a majority of from 10 to 12 votes. The legislature it is thought will address to morrow.—Republican.

Georgia.—We are informed by Col. D. [illegible], Coroner, that on the 11th inst. he convened a jury, and held an inquest on the body of Capt. Benjamin Bean, who was found dead near Huating Creek, in the county of the Yadkin, in this county. The verdict was, 'he came to a natural death by the visitation of God.' Capt. Bean was a respectable man, and kind husband and father. He has left a wife and seven children to mourn his death. Western Carolinian.

An Extraordinary and Beautiful Child, the son of Capt. Henry and Maria Garrett, of this Borough—only SEVEN MONTHS and a few days old. He weighs thirty-old pounds, and can raise the weight of ten pounds in each hand, with apparent ease. His name is CICERO. What can our sister Boroughs (particularly Salisbury) say to this? Great are thy works, 'Old Sarum!' Halifax Compiler.

New-York, Dec 24.

By the Old Line Packet ship Columbia, Capt. Rogers, the editors of the Gazette have received their regular files of papers—say Liverpool to the 8th, London to the 6th, and Lloyds Lists to the 5th ult. inclusive. They are also indebted to Capt. Rogers for extensive files of London journals. Such of their contents as possess interest are given below.

We observe, by our files of Lloyds Lists to the 6th ult. that during the latter part of Oct. and beginning of Nov. the weather had been very tempestuous on the European coast, and that considerable damage had been sustained by foreign vessels.—The prevalent gales were westerly.

Liverpool Markets.—We have been favored with a Liverpool Circular of the 1st. from which we gather the following particulars as to the state of that market:

The inquiry for cotton commenced early in Oct. and holders became firm, and dealers and spinners showed more confidence in purchasing; the consequence was, that upwards of 60,000 bags had been sold during the last four weeks, of which about 24,000 were sold on speculation, consisting of nearly equal quantities of Brazil and American. Of the gross sales, about 38,000 bags were American, viz. 25,050 Uplands, 12,000 New Orleans, 400 Tennesse and Alabama, and 2660 Sea Islands. The imports of the four weeks amounted to 49,500 bags, of which 26,300 were from America. Brazils were fully 1¼ per lb. higher than in the beginning of the month. American Cotton had advanced less in consequence of being offered more freely; the ordinary and middling were about 1-2d and the good about 1-4 higher than at the beginning of the month. The market had been very quiet during the previous week, but the writers (Cropper, Benson & Co.) say "We think it likely there will be a fair demand doing soon." The following are the quotations: Uplands, 6 1-2 to 8 1-2, and very fine up to 9¼; New-Orleans, 7 to 10 1-2, and very good 11¼; Tennessee and Alabama, 6 1-4 to 8 1-4; Sea Islands, 12 to 23.

Tobacco—has become quite brisk in demand. The total sales amount to 1760 hds. consisting of 520 Virginia leaf and 910 stemmed, 250 Kentucky Leaf and 63 Stemmed, and 270 Maryland; most of the latter were very low and sold 2½ a few good brought 7 to 12—about 370 hhds were taken on speculation. Best qualities had improved 2 to 3; interior descriptions were abundant, and had improved very little; low qualities are quoted 1½ to 4; middling 4½ to 5½; good 5 to 5¾, fine 6 to 6 1-2; very fine, 7 to 7 1-2.

Flour—Little desired for exportation, and prices nominal 27 to 30s asked.

A Postscript of the 6th to the Circular from which the above summary is made, says, a public sale took place this day, of which we have no particulars. There appears no change in the markets from the date of this circular up to the 7th

POETRY.

Christmas Hymn.

From yonder beauteous realms of light,
Conceal'd from mortal view,
A numerous train of cherubs bright
To Bethlehem's valley flew.

Dark was the night; in silence drear
The world was hush'd around;
Our earth-born race, devoid of care,
Lay wrapt in sleep profound:

All but a few industrious swains
That guarded, night and day,
Their flocks in safety on the plains
From savage beasts of prey.

When lo! a brighter morn than e'er
Had blush'd o'er Bethlem's sky,
Stopt midnight in her black career,
Made sullen darkness fly.

Around and round an airy throng
Of angels fair appear'd;
Balanc'd on golden clouds they hung;
The shepherds saw and fear'd.

When soft descending from the sky,
In morning blushes clad,
The Angel of the Lord drew nigh,
With speech and visage glad:

'Fear not—sweet messenger from GOD,
Welcome to banish fear—
For in our hands no vengeful rod
Of wrath divine we bear.

But calls of mercy, tidings blest,
From mercy's climes we bring;
Rise shepherd's, to yon village haste,
Salute your infant King.

In Bethlem's town, a peaceful place,
On this auspicious morn,
Of David's long-forgotten race,
Your Saviour CHRIST is born.

You'll find him in a manger mean,
In swaddling bands array'd;
Content to fill a lowly scene,
Till man's just debt be paid.

No kingly rites adorn his birth,
Though born o'er kings to rule;
For thee, O man, he visits earth,
And treads affliction's school.'

Thus Gabriel spoke—th' angelic crow'd,
On golden harps high strung,
As ocean's solemn murmurs loud
This new Hosanna sung;

'All glory be to GOD on high,
To all the earth be peace;
Good will to man, on high,
And henceforth never cease.'

THE MISTAKE.

A croppish macaroni, closely shorn,
Went to a barber's shop one sabbath morn:
Mid rank of wigs he took his seat, to learn
Some barber's news and wait his shaving turn.
Up came old Gauger with his flowing wig,
White as a cauliflower but twice as big.
And peeping round, for he was almost blind,
A vacant block-stand for his wig to find.
He chanced, sad hap! his periwig to pop
Upon the nut brown head of knowing crop.
Up bounced the blade, and swore and flounced about,
'On demame—demme sir, I'll call you out.'
Quick as light horseman vaults into the saddle,
Did Gauger's spectacles his nose bestraddle,
For much he stared to see his old wig walk,
Swear so, and so undutifully talk.
But soon as ever the mistake he spy'd,
The good old man, quite out of breath replied,
'Your feelings, sir, I did not mean to shock,
Indeed, indeed, I took you for a block.'

Miscellaneous.

From O'Meara's 'Voice from St Helena.'

Napoleon observed, that he had seen yesterday an old seaman, which he expressed in English, "He looks," said he, "like a seaman e pare un brav'uomo.—There was with him a midshipman who was on board of the frigate with Usher, when I took a passage in her to Elba. He is much grown," continued he, "but I recollected him." I told him that the midshipman had said, the ship's company of the Undaunted had liked him, (Napoleon,) very much. "Yes," replied Napoleon, "I believe they did; I used to go amongst them, speak to them kindly, and ask different questions. My freedom in this respect quite astonished them, as it was so different from that which they had been accustomed to receive from their own officers. You English are aristocrats. You keep a great distance between yourselves and the popolo."* I observed that on board of a man of-war, it was necessary to keep the seamen at a great distance in order to maintain a proper respect for the officers. "I do not think," replied the emperor, "that it is necessary to keep up so much as you practise. When the officers do not eat or drink, or make too many freedoms with them, I see no necessity for any greater distinctions. Nature formed all men equal. It was always my custom to go amongst the soldiers and the cannaille, to converse with them, ask their little histories, & speak kindly to them. This I found to be of the greatest benefit to me. On the contrary, the generals and officers, li trattai poco bene, and kept them at a great distance.

*People.

"I asked," continued he, "the old seaman where he was to dine, and cautioned him not to get drunk. He told me he was married, and had no children. I asked him what he intended to do with his money. He said that he would leave it to an hospital. I then asked him if he had any nephews or nieces, and recommended him to leave his riches to them, instead of to an hospital.

I told the emperor then, that Lord Amherst, (the late British ambassador to China,) was expected here in a few days. He said, he thought the English ministers had acted wrong in not having ordered him to comply with the customs of the place he was sent to, or otherwise not to have sent him at all. I observed, that the English would consider it as debasing to the nation, if Lord Amherst had consented to prostrate himself in the manner required. That if such a point was conceded, the Chinese would probably not be contented, and would require similar ceremonies to be performed as those insisted upon by the Japanese, and complied with so disgracefully by the Dutch. That, besides, Lord Amherst was willing to pay the same obedience to the Emperor, as he would do to his own King. Napoleon replied, "It is quite a different thing. One is a mere ceremony used by all the great men of the nation to their chief, and the other is a national degradation required of strangers, and of strangers only. It is my opinion, that whatever is the custom of a nation, and is practiced by the first characters of that nation towards their chief, cannot degrade strangers who perform the same. Different nations have different customs. In England you kiss the King's hand at court. Such a thing would be considered ridiculous, and the person who did it would be held up to public scorn; but still the French ambassador who performed it in England, would not be considered to have degraded himself. In England, some hundred years back, the King was served kneeling, the same ceremony now takes place in Spain. In Italy, you kiss the Pope's toe, yet it is not considered as a degredation. A man who goes into the country, must comply with the ceremonies in use there, and it would have been no degradation whatever for Lord Amherst to have submitted to such ceremonies before the Emperor of China, as are performed by the first mandarins of that empire. You say, that he was willing to render such respect as was paid to his own king. You have no right to send a man to China to tell them, that they must perform certain ceremonies, because such are performed in England. Suppose now, for the sake of example, that it were the custom in England, instead of kissing the King's hand, that he should offer his breech to be kissed by those who were presented to him; why then, forsooth, the Emperor of China must turn his backside because such was the practice in England."

These observations were delivered with such suitable action, and significant gestures, that I could not help giving vent very freely to laughter, for some moments, in which the emperor very good humouredly joined.

"If I," continued he, "had sent an ambassador to China I would have ordered him to make himself acquainted with the ceremonies performed before the emperor, by the first mandarins, ; and, if required, to do the same himself, and no more. Now, perhaps, you will lose the friendship of the nation, and great commercial advntages, through this piece of nonsense."

Potter County, Penn. Sept. 11.

On the 9th inst. Jacob B. Vanater went to the Great Elk Lick, on the south branch of the Sinnemahoning, with his two dogs, Wolf and Spring, to watch for elk. Watching till dark, he then retired a short distance, and lay down for the night—his dogs by his side. About midnight, his dogs made a sudden leap, which awoke him, and, about six yards from his head, engaged some animal, which, by its voice, he soon found to be a panther. The fire was nearly out, and he could see neither dogs nor panther. Fearing to go among them, he threw up some remaining fire-brands, thinking to frighten the panther away; but this, for a time, had no effect: at length, however, the animal retreated, fighting the dogs, for a distance of about eight rods, where they had a severe combat, which lasted about a minute, when the noise of the dog Wolf ceased, & fearing the panther had killed his dog, he stood by the fire, which and began to kindle up a little, with his rifle cocked, expecting to be attacked himself. Spring soon came to him, seemingly with good tidings. Soon after, Wolf came and seemed to urge him to the field of battle. He procured some dry bark, made a light, and accompanied them to the spot where to his great joy, he found the panther lifeless. The panther was nine feet in length—the dogs, though badly wounded are likely to recover.

Newport, (R. I) Dec. 4.

The remarkable propensity of cats, in sucking the breath of infants, has often been spoken of, and has been considered by many as fabulous; but an instance occurred in this town last week which should put parents on their guard against this danger. The mother had left the infant in the care of a domestic—on her return, she was informed that the cat was found with its two fore paws fast encircling the child's neck, and its mouth in that of the child, which was nearly suffocated; and great exertions were necessary to extricate the helpless little sufferer from its perilous situation. The story was not much heeded by the mother—but what was her horror on being awakened in the night, by the convulsed struggling of the infant, and finding the same cat, in the same position, and the child again reduced to nearly the last extremity! The cat was immediately thrust out of the window; and so much eagerness did she manifest to return to her victim that she broke through a pane of glass to effect her object. It was not until the cat made a third attempt on the following day, that she was put to death.

To Make a Pickle or Brine for Beef.—To eight gallons of water add half a pound of salt petre, one pound of brown sugar, and one quart of molasses, with as much fine salt as will make it float an egg light, taking care that the salt dissolves lest it be too strong—skim it well and it is fit for use.

Your beef or tongues should be put in cold water and remain 24 hours, then drained for an hour or two, previous to being put into the pickle.

This pickle need not be boiled, (which operation tends to harden the meat) but will remain perfectly sweet till spring, when, after your beef is used or taken out, it will be found the very best in which to cure shad, giving them a delicious flavour, and fine red colour throughout.

This receipt is offered with confidence to the Editor of the Farmer, as one of the very best ever adopted. And it is the opinion of the writer, will answer fully as well for pork with the exception that the latter should not be soaked in water.—Am. Farmer.

Anecdote from "Sketches of the Character, Manners, and present state of the Highlanders of Scotland &c. By Col. David Stewart.

This nice sense of honor is often the virtue of savage life, and even of those who in a more civilized state yet live in open violations of the law. The following anecdote of Sergeant Mor, might, we doubt not, be parallelled in the deserts of Arabia.

This man had been a sergeant in the French service, and came over to Scotland in the year 1745. From his large size he was called Sergeant Mor. Having no settled abode, and dreading the consequence of having served in the army of France, and of having afterwards engaged in the rebellion, he formed a party of outlaws, and took up his residence among the mountains between the counties of Perth, Inverness, and Argyle.—While he plundered the cattle of those whom he called his enemies, he protected the property of his friends and frequently made people on the borders of the Lowlands purchase his forbearance by the payment of Black Mail. Many stories are told of this man. On one occasion he met with an officer of the garrison of Fort William on the mountains of Lochaber. The officer told him that he suspected he had lost his way, and having a large sum of money for the garrison, was afraid of meeting the sergeant Mor; he, therefore, requested that the stranger would accompany him on his road. The other agreed; and while they walked on, they talked much of the sergeant & his feats, the officer using much freedom with his name, calling him robber, murderer—'Stop there,' interrupted his companion, 'he does indeed take the cattle of the Whigs and you Sassenachs, but neither he nor his ceatnahs ever shed innocent blood; except once, added he, 'that I was unfortunate at Braemar, when a man was killed, but I immediately ordered the creach (the spoil) to be abandoned, and left to the owners, retreating as fast as he could after such a misfortune.' 'You!' says the officer, 'what had you to do with the affair?' 'I am John du Cameron; I am the Sergeant Mor; there is the road to Inverlochy—you cannot now mistake it. You and your money are safe. Tell your governor to send a more wary messenger for his gold.—Tell him also, that, although an outlaw, and forced to live on the public, I am a soldier as well as himself, and would despise taking his gold from a defenceless man who confided in me.' The officer lost no time in reaching the garrison, and never forgot the adventure, which he frequently related.

Two men were recently buried alive by the caving in of a part of the bank of the Canal, in which they were employed working. Although immediately dug out, they could not be resuscitated. The Monroe Republican mentions, as a singular circumstance attending the accident, "that the persons who were killed, anticipated before the bank fell, that they were in danger, and for the purpose of being warned, in case the bank should crack, very injudiciously placed a man to watch it who stuttered. As the bank began to crack off the man attempted to alarm them: but it was not till after the bank fell, that his impediment would allow him the sound of his voice."

Singular Titles.—Among the French devotional pieces, burlesque has ever reigned in the titles of their books of piety; as 'The Snuffers of Divine Love,'—'The Spiritual Mustard Pot, to make the soul sneeze with devotion,—'The Capuchin, booted and spurred for Paradise'

Scriptural Question.—How is it that Methusalah, although he is said to have been the oldest man that ever lived, yet died before his father?—Evening Post.

The following lines were placed over the ten Commandments in a Welch Church, and remained, as tradition says, an enigma for a whole century before the true meaning was found. One vowel is wanting to make the words complete.
